I'm an information scientist, entrepreneur and full-stack developer from South Africa, based in the UK. I've created my own startups, hepled others create websites and brands, and I've learned and gained valuable experience from failure.

I can help you build software products from concept through to production. I'm interested in moving towards a career path that allows for more of a leadership or management role, either as a technical co-founder or product owner.

Passionate about the intersection of branding, design, and web development.

At university I started out with a Bachelor of Information Science: Specialising in Multimedia, since then I've moved onto Computer Science, created two startups, and recently finished an MA Entrepreneurship.

As an information scientist, I have a great eye for digital design, user experience and branding. With a new fountation of business & entrepreneurship, these skills allow me to design and build products that don't only look great, but I can help you create viable and agile business solutions.

On the side, I've been studying transpersonal psychology, life coaching, authentic self empowerment, and various other holistic techniques. My life coaching training mixes well with my study in entrepreneurship and I enjoy applying these skills to business, teams and leadership.
